AZAD MADNI RECEIVES THE DISTINGUISHED ASME CIE LEADERSHIP AWARD

From the Computers in Engineering Division

Los Angeles, CA, June 16, 2019 — Azad Madni receives the ASME CIE Leadership Award. This award recognizes an individual in industry/government for outstanding leadership in advancing the use of computers in engineering practice. To ensure that it is presented to appropriately qualified recipients and to maintain the prestigious nature of the award, it may not be presented every year. This award is made by the Computers in Engineering Division. Selection is based on evaluation of accomplishments as evidenced by documented testimonials, which should clearly demonstrate the nominee's leadership in advancing the state of the art in the use of computers and information/knowledge/process management solutions for engineering processes, including developing innovative software and/or ensuring widespread use of computational techniques and/or accelerating solution adoption, assimilation and deployment in an organization. Past winners of the ASME CIE Leadership Award include John Sculley, Apple Computers, Joseph F. Gloudeman, MacNeal Schwendler Corp., Steven C. Jacobsen, University of Utah, and BVR Mohan Reddy, Exec. Chairman, Cyient.
